150th Birthday Celebration Honors Owen D. Young

By Cathy Woodruff
*Van Hornesville Community Corp.
Archive Volunteer*

During the early 20th Century, Owen D. Young was famous far beyond his small hometown farming community of Van Hornesville.

Chosen as TIME magazine's Man of the Year in 1929, Young was then, among his many distinctions, chairman of the board of the General Electric Company and an exceptional figure in international affairs. His leadership and influence were recognized around the world.

Nearly 100 years later, Young's genuine international notoriety has faded. But nowhere is his lasting impact recognized more tangibly than in Van Hornesville, where children still are educated in the architecturally superb public school he gave to his community.

And, as Owen D. Young Central School alumni and Young's descendants prepare to gather on October 27th to celebrate what would be his 150th birthday, Young's larger vision of vast educational and cultural opportunities for all rural children is proving relevant again in today's context as regional high schools for New York are discussed.

Guest speakers at a "birthday party" and ice cream social honoring Young will include Paul Doty, curator of Special Collections and Archives at St. Lawrence University – where the college library bears his name, – and Dr. Keith Landa, a trustee of the State University of New York and president of the faculty Senate.

Young, a member of the state Board of Regents from 1934 to 1946, chaired a commission that, in 1949, recommended establishment of what is now SUNY. From the beginning, the SUNY system has prepared teachers for the state's classrooms and included many campuses in rural areas of the state.

Young's lifelong dedication to rural education stemmed from his own experience as a farm boy in Van Hornesville, where after early grades at a one-room schoolhouse, his father took him each Monday morning to spend the week attending upper grades in East Springfield.

When he was a boy, Young recalled in a speech marking the completion of the original ODY school building in 1927, "the word 'rural' did not suggest the charm of country living, but rather a limitation of cultural opportunity."

With the new Van Hornesville school, Young sought to bolster educational opportunities close to home for children living on farms, and he foresaw the later expansion of the school building to serve a "centralized" district for more rural students through their high school years.

A good education paved Young's path to a career of success in corporate law, finance and international affairs. But he knew that his own road had been the exception rather than the rule.

With the encouragement of a St. Lawrence University president who met him while preaching at Van Hornesville's Universalist Church, Young had been able to attend St. Lawrence, and he later worked his way through Boston University Law School. He began his legal career in Boston as the 19th Century drew to a close.

The bright young corporate lawyer was tapped to become president and chairman of the board of the General Electric Corporation during the 1920s and 1930s, an extraordinary period of growth and innovation for the Schenectady-based company. Under his leadership, GE became a leader in the manufacture of home appliances and electrification of rural America.

He also was instrumental in the creation of RCA, the Radio Corporation of America, as the U.S. sought to advance its early leadership in broadcast technology during the infancy of radio in the 1920s. He was a founder of the National Broadcasting Company (NBC), too, as it expanded into development of television.

His efforts in international relations and finance included his work with

Charles Dawes, elected vice president in 1924, on a plan intended to bring economic stability to Europe after World War I.

Despite his professional accomplishments, however, Young's chief ambitions in retirement were to enjoy the company of good friends in Van Hornesville, nurture his abiding interest in development of the Holstein dairy cattle breed and advance the availability of rural public education.

It was his great wish, it seems, to enable rural children to fulfill their intellectual and professional dreams without having to leave country life behind.

As Young told listeners as he was about to leave for Europe for work on the Dawes Plan in 1924: "All this city life, even all this business, shrinks to smaller proportions when I get back to the farm for a while."

CAR CARE

The importance of routine vehicle maintenance

Owning a car is a big responsibility. Drivers who plan to keep their vehicles for the long haul must emphasize maintenance if they want to keep adding miles to their odometers. In fact, the automotive information site CarAdvice says that routine maintenance may be the most important thing drivers can do for their vehicles.

A vehicle needs consistent care if it is to run efficiently. Maintenance also reduces the risk of roadside breakdowns and costly repairs. Here's a look at some of the benefits of staying on top of maintenance.

- Saves money: Even though maintenance costs money, sticking to a consistent maintenance schedule can save big bucks in the long run. For example, the cost of rotating and aligning tires is considerably less than repairing a car after a major blowout and paying for a tow and tire replacement.
- Improves performance and efficiency: Routine maintenance includes oil changes, filter changes and fluid top-offs. Such tasks keep engines running smoothly. Ignoring this routine maintenance can put engines in jeopardy of breaking down and adversely affect vehicle performance, diminishing fuel economy and leading to a sluggish ride.
- Identifies safety issues: Routine inspections and work performed by reputable service stations help drivers stay abreast of recalls or issues that can affect the safety of the vehicle.
- Maintains a maintenance record: When the time comes to sell the vehicle, having a log of routine maintenance indicates to potential buyers that the vehicle was well cared for.
- Keeps compliance: Vehicles covered under manufacturer's warranties typically need to be maintained in adherence to factory-recommended maintenance schedules. This ensures that the vehicle is in compliance and will be covered in the event of a warranty claim.

Routine vehicle maintenance is important for a variety of reasons. Drivers can work with a trusted and reliable mechanic to develop a schedule that keeps their cars and trucks on the road. FC19A290
