FIRST CLASS PASSENGERS RIDE - SECOND CLASS WALK - THIRD CLASS GET OUT AND PUSH!

Knowing that we now can travel to the moon and beyond, it seems impossible to think that at the beginning of the settlement of this area, transportation in most forms, was unheard of. If you had to go to a different location, you walked, rode a horse, or went by horse and cart. The addition of a way for the public to travel distances would be a major help to the everyday life of the population. And then came the advent of the stagecoach.

What was it like to travel this way? An article by Richard Palmer, printed in the MERURY, give us an explanation. "The old stagecoach came into town with a flourish amid the clatter of galloping horses and a sounding horn. Its round body was swung on leather straps; its passengers tossed about like dice in a box.

The gallant driver pulled on the reins and the four steaming horses halted in front of the inn. (These were also known as public houses.) After whirling up to the 'stoop', luggage from the 'boot' was unloaded, the traces of the horses were unhooked, and the exhausted animals were led around to the stable to their familiar stalls. Usually, stagecoaches in this part of the country used four-horse teams. The horses in front were the leaders and the rear two, the wheelers.

The stage driver, decked out in a greatcoat and buckskin gloves, was a very welcome figure in every village along the old turnpike because they depended on him for the arrival of mail and the latest news from the outside world.

Soon the stable boys trotted out a fresh team and in a few moments the passengers reclaimed their seats. The driver mounted his seat, called the 'box', slung the mail sack beneath him, sounded his bugle and, with a crack of the whip, the stage lurched off down the dusty road."

The stagecoach era existed in New York State for more than half a century although this form of public transportation was first found in Great Britain in the 1600s. In this country, from 1790 until the completion of the network of railroads across the state in the early 1840s, the stagecoach reigned as the supreme mode of public conveyance, later supplementing the Erie Canal packet boats.

Early coaches were constructed with iron and steel springs which made for a very uncomfortable ride. By 1827, long leather straps were developed to give a swaying motion to the coach which greatly increased the comfort of the passengers. This type was often called the Concord stagecoach.

Stage stations were erected about fifteen miles apart. The coachmen carried letters, packages and money and often transacted business or delivered messages for their customers.

"During winter and spring, the roads could be a terror to timid passengers, occasionally becoming impassable. Now and then the teams would become mired in the mud and passengers would assist in lifting the coach out of a mudhole. Long stretches of road through swamps were bridged on corduroy roads, formed by cutting down the adjacent timber, trimming off branches and placing the logs side-by-side across the road. Under such rough conditions, timid travelers would stop over at a convenient wayside tavern for the night and rest until another stage came along. Such a trip from Albany to Buffalo frequently would require nearly a week in the very early days.

Although many hardships were encountered in traveling by stage, such a journey was not entirely void of pleasures. There were deep forests of towering hemlocks and pine trees. Here and there a little clearing appeared where a settler and his family had built a log house. The scenery was varied and interesting and the passengers generally sociable. The stage drivers were a daring lot but very energetic and faithful to the performance of their duties. accidents were few and far between.

The stage fare was five cents per mile. The 'waybill' which the driver carried showed that the passenger had been to the stage office to pay his fare and the agent had registered him. This saved the driver the trouble of handling the fares."

One of the coaches that appeared in our area was that of the Fort Plain to Cooperstown run, originally owned by Captain Abiather Hubbard Watkins, who operated stages that serviced Cooperstown, Richfield Springs, Cherry Valley, Ft. Plain and Sharon Springs. Captain Watkins started his career at the early age of fourteen when he was a stage driver on the route between Harpersfield and Catskill. At twenty-four, he was a sub-contractor on mail routes through this section and for years he owned and operated various stagecoach routes.

At the time of the building of the D & H railroad, he ran stages from different directions to the temporary terminals, his lines acting as feeders for the railroad.

Watkins was certainly an early entrepreneur. With the slowing down of the use of stagecoaches, he took on operating a livery stable and running a steamboat line and an express route from Cooperstown to Richfield Springs. In 1870, he built the steamboat called the 'Natty Bumpo', which traveled on Otsego Lake as a pleasure boat. Unfortunately, it burned to the water's edge in 1872. Not giving up, Watkins rebuilt the 65' long, 20' wide steamboat and it served the public for any years, adding to the enjoyment of the area.

Watkins death in 1903 ended his career but his contribution to the advancement of transportation in the 19th century was one of great importance to this area.

LAWN & GARDEN

Eco-friendly lawn care can be easy

Homeowners know that a healthy lawn can add considerable curb appeal to a property while giving residents of the home a place to relax and enjoy the great outdoors. But few might know that a healthy lawn can also benefit the environment, especially when homeowners take a proactive approach to lawn care that emphasizes eco-friendly techniques.

A proactive approach to lawn care can prevent certain problems, including disease, insect infestation and weed growth. When such problems arise, many homeowners opt to combat them with pesticides, which can harm the environment. But a proactive approach to lawn care can reduce the likelihood of developing such problems and protect the planet at the same time.

- Emphasize healthy soil. Healthy soil promotes strong roots, which leads to a more robust, lush and aesthetically appealing lawn. While a lawn needs to be fertilized in the spring and at various points throughout the summer, it's important that homeowners avoid overfertilization, which can create thatch that, when allowed to thicken, will prevent nutrients from penetrating the soil. Lawns need more nitrogen, phosphorous and potassium than soil can typically provide, so fertilizing throughout the warm weather seasons and into early fall can promote a healthy lawn. But choose a slow-release fertilizer so it gradually feeds the lawn. Compost and grass clippings can also be spread around the lawn to promote healthy soil. The pH level of the soil should also be checked to ensure the lawn can fully absorb nutrients. Speak with a local lawn care professional to determine what a healthy pH level is for soil in your area.

- Choose a grass that can thrive in your climate. Though you might prefer the look of a certain grass, choosing a grass based entirely on appearance is a mistake that could cost you money and prove harmful to the environment. When installing a new lawn, opt for one that's suitable to the local climate. Installing a lawn that needs substantial amounts of water in a region known for drought can rob the lawn of its aesthetic appeal and will cost homeowners a substantial amount of money to maintain. If an existing lawn struggles to stay green regardless of your best efforts, then consider replacing it with a new type of grass that might be more suited to the local climate.

- Don't cut too low when mowing. Homeowners who don't enjoy mowing their lawn might be tempted to simply cut the grass as low as possible to extend the intervals between cuts. But the United States Environmental Protection Agency recommends that grass never be cut more than one-third of the height of the grass blades. Longer grass can take in more sunlight, allowing it to grow in thicker and develop a deeper root system. That deep root system can help a lawn survive drought and prevent disease, two potentially costly problems that often force homeowners to embrace solutions that are not eco-friendly. Ideal lawn height depends on the type of grass, so consult a lawn care professional to ensure you are cutting your grass to a healthy length.

- Avoid overwatering. Excessive watering not only wastes water, which is not very eco-friendly, but also hurts the lawn when dry periods inevitably arrive. That's because shallow and frequent watering encourages roots to stay near the surface, so when dry periods arrive, the roots struggle to find water. The EPA notes that an established lawn should not need daily watering. Instead, watering responsibly when the lawn needs water and when evaporation can be kept to a minimum, can strengthen a lawn and do so in an eco-friendly way. GT144076
